A U T H O R

Call them, pick up the phone and give them a call.

The majority of the people don't answer, because they don't recognize your phone number, and probably won't answer their phone. At that point you need to leave a voicemail message, and the message should be a very simple into the point.

Example:

Hey this is (your first name) just getting back to you about making money from home, listen, it's real important, so call me as soon as you get this,

xxx-xxx-xxxx. <<<<CLICK>>>

The next step should be to immediately text them, mentioning that you sent them a voicemail message in regards to earning additional income by working from home. The call to action is to set up an interview to discuss various options to collaborate.

The next step if they do not respond is to send them a simple email referencing that you left a message and texted them with the same call to action on the email being to set up an appointment for an interview about earning some additional income working from home.

If you get a phone number that doesn't work it usually means that the person doesn't want to be contacted by phone, at that point you should send them a simple email the call to action on the email should be to set up an appointment for an interview about earning some additional income working from home.

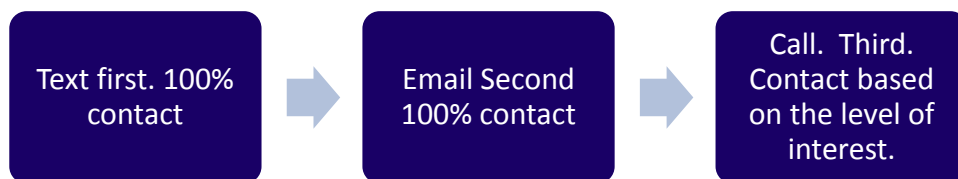

You should never get long-winded on voicemails or emails they should be to the point and you should build to the next step.

The next step should always be an interview with the prospect.

We always provide an additional 10% with all your orders to account for bad records.

By using these Three methods of contact you should be able to make contact with every prospect that you get.

Just remember, this is a sorting business do not focus on anyone prospect...

Content for your first text reach out message.

Hello _____,

I'm reaching out to you because you expressed an interest in working from home. Are you looking for a part-time or full-time opportunity?

This could be a follow up with any response that is positive.

I would like to set up a time we can interview you to see if you would be a good fit for our team and if our team would be a good fit for what you are looking for.

What's a good time for you?

The content for the email should be very similar. You should not discuss your business opportunity or any details about your business this is a call to action to an interview.

If you happen to reach somebody the best way to transition is by using this phrase:

Hello _____,

my name is because you recently expressed an interest in working from home what are you looking for a part-time or full-time?
